ABOUT

Mission Statement

To develop a learning network that enhances the arts and cultural experiences within the communities of Eastern Ontario, and to foster strong support for the performing arts in all of its expressions.

Our Values

- Promoting a love of artistic and cultural life
- Collaboration with artists and organizations across the region
- Developing a learning environment that fosters experiential learning in the arts

Our Artistic Beliefs

The Collective is founded on three core beliefs:

- Experiencing the arts in their diverse forms is transformational
- Developing an artistic practice is accessible to everyone
- Engaging with the arts is an individual journey that leads to personal growth

What Counts as Performing Arts, Here

Performing arts are creative acts done in front of an audience — using voice, body, or objects. Our community spans:

Art Form	What It Looks Like
Theatre	Plays, dramas, and musical theatre — stories acted out through speech, gesture, and staging
Dance	Ballet, tap, jazz, and other rhythmic movement used to express idea or emotion
Music	Live concerts, singing, and instrumental performance
Opera	Dramatic storytelling through singing, with live orchestral accompaniment
Circus & Physical Arts	Acrobatics, juggling, magic, and mime
Spoken Word	Poetry, stories, and speeches performed live to connect with an audience

Where We Stand Today

The Collective currently operates as an unincorporated association — an informal agreement among members with no filing fees, though also without personal liability protection. We'll move toward incorporating as a non-profit once our membership base grows to a point where it clearly benefits the people we serve.

We operate in partnership with Aspen Training Centre, which provides student support for running the Collective — meaning your membership fees also help fund real, hands-on training opportunities for the students who help keep things running.

PARTNERS

In partnership with Aspen Training Centre

Aspen Training Centre provides student support that keeps the Collective running day to day — a practicum-style arrangement that gives students real experience while helping our members get the support they need.

PERFORMANCE ART

A separate practice from the performing arts, worth its own space on the site.

Where the performing arts (theatre, dance, music, opera, circus, spoken word) are about a piece being performed for an audience, performance art is its own fine-art discipline — the artist's live presence, body, and actions are the artwork itself, often shown in a gallery or museum context rather than a stage.

A performance art piece typically centers five elements: time, space, the artist's body, the artist's presence, and the relationship between artist and audience. It can be scripted or fully improvised, and it can happen anywhere — a gallery, a public square, or somewhere unexpected — for any length of time. The goal isn't a polished show so much as a live reaction: pieces are often tied to the artist's own experience, and to social or political commentary.

We're carving this out as its own category because folding it into "performing arts" undersells what makes it distinct — it belongs alongside our other categories, not inside one of them.
